In his speech, Malcolm Scott will explain the British-German relationship and highlight positive developments under the Coalition Government. Both, the UK and the German government, have come to realize the benefits of close cooperation. This is particularly true for the business area. By tradition, trade and investment links between the two countries have been very close. With the change of government in London, an even stronger emphasis was put on commercial issues and the improvement of trade relations altogether. The UK has much to offer, it is open for business and interested in bilateral trade and investment activity with Germany.

Malcolm Scott was appointed British Consul-General to Düsseldorf and Director of UK Trade & Investment in Germany in August 2009. He has worked in the UK civil service since 1987, mainly in the areas of European trade and policy towards industry. He worked on the coordination of measures leading up to the creation of the Single European Market in 1992, and from 1992 to 1994 he was private secretary to the Minister for Industry. In 2001 he gained an MBA qualification from Imperial College, London, followed by two years as Director Europe in UK Trade & Investment. From 2004 to 2009 he was Director of Aerospace, Marine and Defence in the Department for Business.

Malcolm Scott was born in 1961 and educated at Dollar Academy and St Andrews University, where he studied German and Music. He is married to Julia Davis, a doctor working in East London. In his spare time he enjoys playing the piano and walking in the countryside.
